Luckily for both the practitioner facing the consumer credit maze for the first time and the experienced practitioner considering some of the more arcane points of credit disclosure, there are some treatises and law review articles on TILA. This treatise is one such reference. It is updated regularly online and new paper editions are published every few years. Truth in Lending has been cited in over a hundred law reviews, journals, and continuing legal education publications, and numerous reported decisions.

A second reference on Truth in Lending Act issues is Ralph J. Rohner and Fred H. Miller, Truth in Lending (2000), published by the American Bar Association. Relevant sections are cited throughout this treatise.

Footnotes

306 [306] This is a revised version of a 1984 treatise by Ralph Rohner. Although the book continues to bear his name, Ralph Rohner had no direct role in the updating process, which was a project of the Consumer Financial Services Committee of theABA’s Section of Business Law. One editor was a professor, but most if not all of the other editors and contributing authors were connected to the credit industry.

Source: National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending [10th ed.], updated at www.nclc.org/library
Source URL: https://library.nclc.org/til/010505