Credit Discrimination is available in both a print and digital version. Print revisions are released every few years and the digital version is updated more frequently, with all changes integrated into the text. The digital edition also provides access to additional companion materials, as described in § 1.2.6 [1], infra: additional pleadings and discovery, primary source material, the full text of selected federal appellate court decisions, and practice tools.

The digital version is available at www.nclc.org/library [2]. It allows pinpoint searches of the book, easy navigation between subsections, and active links to external websites, other sections in the book and other National Consumer Law Center (NCLC) treatises. Material in the digital version can be copy and pasted, downloaded, printed, or emailed.

Clicking on “highlight updates” at the top of the screen in the digital edition highlights those additions made to the digital version since the release of the latest print edition. This option also reveals, in curly brackets at the beginning of each digital footnote, the corresponding footnote number in the print edition (if the footnote appears in the print edition). Important law changes are indicated in the digital edition with red flags, and very recent updates with blue flags. The digital version also allows users to annotate, highlight, and bookmark text, along with other useful features.

Subscriptions are available in either digital-only or print + digital options. Subscribers to the print + digital option receive, as part of their subscription price (at no additional charge), any revised print edition that is released during their subscription period.

Additional usernames can be purchased at minimal cost, allowing those additional users to receive their own emails about important new developments, to create their own annotations and bookmarks, and to personalize their digital experience by allowing a rapid return to recently viewed pages.

Source: National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination [8th ed.], updated at www.nclc.org/library

Source URL: https://library.nclc.org/cd/010202

Links